CIRCULAR ECONOMY

MASTER'S DEGREE

The Course touches on specific aspects of Circular Economy aiming to provide students with a series of innovative tools to operate in a context of economic and environmental sustainability. Students will be surrounded in a multidisciplinary environment, learning the best practices, choices thought for the sustainability strategies and will interact with the most experienced and talented organizations in facing environmental challenges and building the circularity. Equipping the student to operate consciously in different areas, often heterogeneous among them, integrating technological innovation, new skills in activities of productive reconversion and sustainable development.

The structure of the course: Two Curricula

1st year: a common path oriented to the learning of themes, methods, and tools often used in a circular approach to the economy.

2nd year: two alternative paths.

- The Green curriculum is focused on industrial production in a circular vision, where each process is characterized by a sustainable approach through the minor use of traditional raw materials, the use of new forms of energy, recovery, and recycling, the use of natural substances and reuse of waste from other sectors, and it is therefore called the "green economy".
- The Blue curriculum is oriented towards a circular approach to the economy of the sea, in all its forms, tourism, nature, logistics, trade, and therefore called the blue economy '.
